England Moves Toward Enforcement Of Her Demands

(Associated Press) LONDON, Nov. 24.—The admiral has ordered the super dreadnaught iron Duke to Alexandria, Egypt; the battleship Malaya to Port Said and the cruiser Caradoc and two destroyers to the Sudan.

The evacuation of the Sudan by the Egyptian army has begun, says an agency dispatch from Cairo this afternoon.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 24.—Lord Allenby, the British high commissioner, at noon today informed the Egyptian premier, Zagloul Pasha, that instructions has been given to British forces to occupy the Alexandria customs. This, he said, was the first measure to be taken in consequence of Egypt's non-acceptance of all the British demands following the assassination of Sir Lee Stack, the sirdar.

An indemnity of 500,000 pounds, demanded by the British for the death of the sirdar, was paid by the Egyptian government at 11:45 o'clock this morning.

The Egyptian cabinet headed by Zagloul Pasha tendered its resignation today to King Fuada, who accepted it. The King summoned Ziwari Pasha, president of the senate, who consented to form a cabinet.

Married Thrice, Is Father of 21

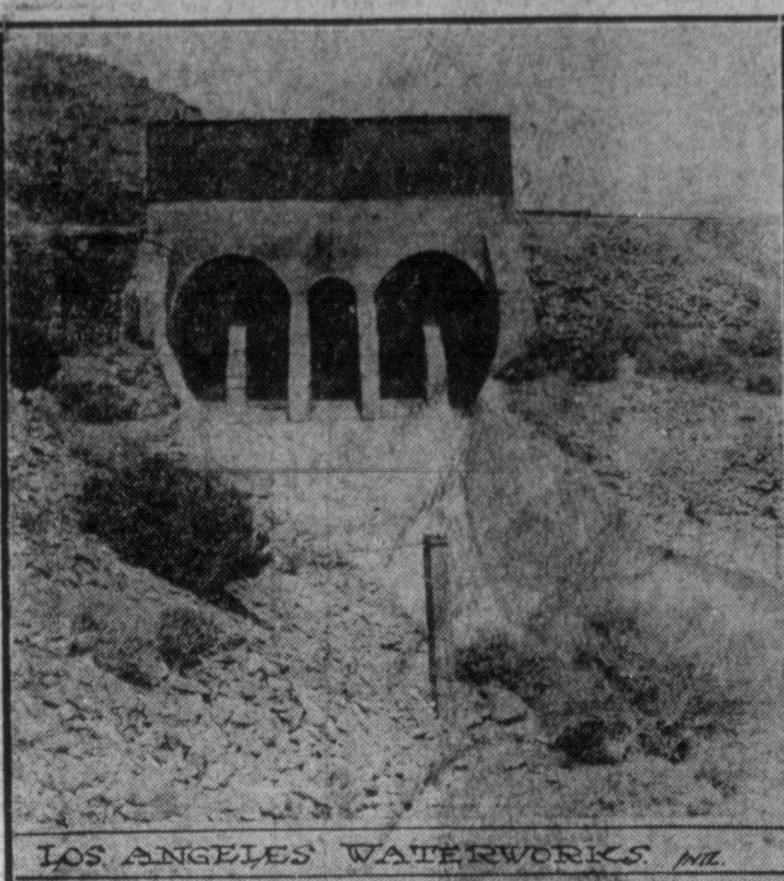

An unusual bridegroom appeared before Probate Judge L. P. Troup late Saturday afternoon, requesting a marriage license.

The applicant, a negro, declared his age was 60 years. He stated he had been married three times, the first ceremony having been performed when he was 30 years old. He said he was the father of 21 children.

A number of local prophets of the Albany-Decatur Grotto club will go to Cullman tonight, to speak to Cullman Masons in the interest of the forthcoming ceremonial here on December 12 of the Kam Ram Grotto, when several hundred candidates will be initiated into the organization. It will be the first ceremonial ever held here by the Grotto and is attracting wide attention.

LOS ANGELES WATER RAID IS ENDED

Two hundred ranchmen from the Owens Valley in California have relinquished the headgates of the Los Angeles waterworks, located near Lone Pine, which they held for several days, opening the spill gates and leaving Los Angeles waterless. Last Spring, these same ranchers blew up a section of the aqueduct. The trouble began when the waterworks was built, in 1913, the ranchmen claiming all water had thereby been diverted from their irrigation system in Owens Valley and ruined their farms. The city officials have agreed to furnish them the water they need. The waterworks cost the city $22,000,000.

PASTOR IMPRESSED WITH NEED OF MISSION EFFORTS AT HOME

Rev. James D. Wallace Preaches Interesting Sermon At First Presbyterian

Dr. James D. Wallace, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Decatur, told his congregation Sunday morning, that while he was a foreign missionary volunteer when in college and was as enthusiastic for mission work on foreign fields as ever, that in late years he had come to the conclusion that Christianity for the home and for America is the supreme issue with the church today. The preacher showed that only a little over a third of the people of the United States were members of any religious body, and that the increase in population is much greater now, than the increase in church membership.

The congregation was told there were only two practical ways of evangelizing the "home mission field" and they are: Either hire preachers and teachers for our rural communities, or else the men and women of the churches must get into their automobiles, and go out to the country sections and preach and teach.

Dr. Wallace had taken his text from Act 8-4 and 5, where it was stated the early apostles "went everywhere preaching the word" after persecutions had driven them from their home town. Philip, the deacon who was also an evangelist was held up to the congregation as a worthy example to be followed by modern church officials.

Will Elect Officers Next Sunday
Following the opening devotional exercises, Dr. Wallace announced that on next Sunday, the congregation would be called upon to elect a trustee for the church, one deacon and probably two elders. With Mrs. Lahleen Kinney in charge of the music a number of hymns were sung at the opening and just before the sermon "In That Home of Sweet Forever" was sung as a solo by Mrs. Frank Morrow in a very inspiring manner.

"Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word. Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them," were the words of the scripture text used. Dr. Wallace said that his subject "Home Missions," declaring that missions are the basis of all mission activities. In king of the part persecution has been world, the speaker said it had caused people to value their

Unique Still Is Captured Today

What was declared to be a unique and cleverly disguised still was found in the shop of a negro here this morning and carried to the sheriff's office. The still consisted of a canning boiler with a specially constructed cap that might be screwed off and a plain one put in its place. The worm is screwed into the cap. The complete still can be converted into an innocent canning apparatus within two minutes, and all traces of its real accomplishments erased. On this occasion, however, the owner did not have the two minutes for the conversion.

STAINS AND TISSUE ARE DISCOVERED IN HOME OF MINISTER

Fingermarks Also Are Found In Parsonage At Bexley Today

EXPERIMENT WITH PIG IS SCHEDULED

Seek To Determine If Woman Breathed In Furnace

(Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Nov. 24.—A bit of tissue that may have been scraped from the body of a human and dark stains, which may be bloodspots, were found in the parsonage of the Christ Evangelical Lutheran church in Bexley today by County Prosecutor John R. King and assistants, who are seeking to solve the mysterious death of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, aged 50, whose body, practically cremated, was found in the furnace of the house a week ago by her husband, the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley.

Authorities who today were making a minute examination of the interior of the dwelling also discovered a number of finger-marks.

This afternoon experiments, by which authorities expect to show that carbon monoxide gas will kill a breathing animal within the furnace, will be conducted, Mr. King said.

Guinea pigs will be placed in the fire box. The guinea pig experiment is expected to bear out the report of chemist, C. F. Long, that Mrs. Sheatsley did not breathe after her body entered the furnace. Mr. Long came to this conclusion after analytical examination of blood taken from the victim's lungs failed to reveal any trace of carbon monoxide.

Had she breathed, he contends, her blood would have become saturated with the poison. The bit of tissue was noted on the asbestos wrapping of a heat conduit, just above the furnace door, Mr. King said.

Both specimens will be examined by Chemist Long and Dr. H. M. Brundage, a pathologist, in an effort to determine if they came from the body of a human being. Mr. King said this morning he was more firmly convinced than ever that Mrs. Sheatsley did not enter the furnace voluntarily.

Developments have proven to him conclusively, he said, that she did not commit suicide, after becoming violently insane, which is the expressed conviction of Rev. Sheatsley.

Investigation of the Bexley furnace mystery entered its second week today when Prosecutor John R. King followed a lead which he developed yesterday. Mr. King would not make known now what additional information he had obtained in his efforts to determine how the body of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, wife of the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, of Christ Lutheran church, came to be in the furnace of the Sheatsley home.

The prosecutor, however, said he was encouraged by developments.

A resolution, adopted yesterday by the members of Rev. Sheatsley's congregation contained a prayer for divine guidance that the "real culprit" would be discovered and brought to justice.

Escaped Prisoner Finally Captured

Will Cole, white, was caught in Somerville, Tenn., by a deputy sheriff on Sunday, and will probably be brought back to Decatur today.

Cole escaped jail here in the wholesale delivery last August when six prisoners escaped by picking a hole through the wall of the county jail. Cole is the third one to be returned.

Cole has been held by the grand jury and will probably be tried in the next session of circuit court. He is charged with making whiskey.

LAYMAN'S COUNCIL WILL START WORK OF SOCIAL SERVICE

Committee Is Named To Make a Report At December Meet

O'REAR MAKES FINE ADDRESS

Methodist Pastor Is the Principal Speaker At the Meeting

The Christian Layman's Council of the Twin Cities will undertake to care for underprivileged children provided plans suggested at the meeting of the council at the Central Methodist church Sunday afternoon are executed. The chairman of the council, W. L. Hatchett, following instructions of the membership, named a committee composed of H. L. David, chairman of the social service committee of the council, T. L. Baker and J. E. Blair, to make a report at the December meeting of the council, to be held in the First Methodist church of Decatur, as to ways and means for such a service.

In the principal address at the council meeting by Dr. Claude O'Rear, that minister commended the concern of the council to undertake a definite social service. The speaker made reference to the proposed service in connection with his 23 minute address on "The Good Samaritan."

Dr. O'Rear said there were four classes of people depicted in the story of the "Good Samaritan," first the open law breakers, like the man who robbed the traveler, second the "aggressively good," those who seek to raise the fallen, third the priest and the Levite, and fourth those who are down and are raised by others.

The speaker declared that law violators were able to escape the law too readily in America through legal loop-holes and the like. He said the Samaritan, perhaps tried not only to save one man from robbers, but to make the whole world a good safe place in which to live.

It was declared Christ's condemnation of the priest and Levite, fixed their status, and that the poor man who was helped "ever after had a vision of good men, and that no one could keep him from believing in the goodness of the human race at its best."

Meeting Called to Order by Lovin

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 24.—Robert D. Edwards, 25, alleged slayer of Miss Imogene Lee, will not be alone when he goes on trial for his life December 1, according to a statement of Fred Woodward, his attorney.

Woodward stated he had written to several brothers and the mother to be on hand for the trial and he was certain that his mother and at least one brother would be here.

Arraigned before Judge William E. Fort Saturday, Edwards declined to reveal what defense he would claim, but after a conference with his attorney it was announced he would plead insanity.

Second Celebration Of Safety Record To Be Held Soon

MEN HELPING TO STOP ACCIDENTS

Much Pain and Misery Prevented By Care Of the Workers

The local L. & N. sheepmen are entering their sixth accidentless month, stated C. W. Mathews, chairman of the "Safety First" committee, and Master Mechanic of the shops.

Comparative records from all over the country as to "Safety First" fail to show a single instance of where 1700 men, approximately the number working at the local shops, have worked so many months without an accident. The present excellent showing is the result of a number of years training against carelessness in the use of tools around high speed machinery, and against the use of hammers in the boiler shop not properly cared for. In the car department much care has been exercised in the work of lifting the car timbers and in the handling of the cars on the switch yard.

In speaking of the marked change as to accidents, Mr. Mathews said that before the "Safety First" campaigns were entered into, it was nothing unusual for a month to yield eight or nine reportable accidents. At that rate in the past five months forty accidents have been prevented. Should each man hurt have lost 10 days, 400 days work have been saved, and to put the estimate low, if each man hurt was making an average of $4 per day, $1600 has been saved to the men, and 400 days' work to the railroad company, to say nothing of the pain and doctor's bills.

SPEED CASES MAY GO TO HIGH COURT

City Loses the Initial Round In Appeal Cases Today

The City of Albany, in county court today, lost the first round in the legal fight which has arisen over enforcement of anti-speeding ordinances, when Judge W. T. Lowe sustained the demurrer of the defense in the first of the many cases on the docket. The decision of the court may be appealed to the state supreme court by the city. Pending a decision the remaining "speed" cases, up on appeal, were continued.

The day was given over largely to appeal cases from local police courts and much interest was manifested especially in the appeals from convictions for speeding. A number of attorneys had been retained by individuals who had appealed their cases from the Albany police court. The city also was represented by City Attorney G. O. Chenault and other officials.

The first case on the docket was the City of Albany vs. Rountree and Tennis Tidwell, attorney for the defendant, cited an Alabama statute, in his demurrer, which he claimed permitted a municipality to regulate traffic only on congested streets, at crossings and in turning corners. The demurrer was upheld by the court and the other cases were continued.

Independents Show Moulton For A Loss For Second Time In Season; McRee Stars

Moulton territory after Speer's long dash down the sideline after having intercepted a Moulton pass and aided by some splendid interference on the part of Garrison he returned 40 yards before being stopped.

The game was featured by the all round play of McRee, Gustin, Watson and Bowen for the Independents while Free, Moody and the Shelton brothers were the outstanding lights in the Moulton defense.

McRee smashed the Moulton line at will and was never held when he was given the ball. His brilliant play for the afternoon was without fault and he was on the receiving end of a number of Independent passes from Ellison.

The game opened Saturday afternoon with a determined Moulton rush after Kirby had kicked off short to the 30-yard line. Moulton returned to the middle of the field and registered two first downs driving through the line and around the ends to within the 20-yard mark. Here the Albany forwards halted the attack with McRee stopping every effort at the line from his position at defensive fullback. The Independents failed to gain and kicked short and Moulton started another march but again was denied. The first quarter ended with Moulton still deep in Independent territory. The second quarter was almost a replica of the first with each team displaying a powerful defensive game against line bucking tactics but weak on the aerial defense. The beginning of the second half Moulton again received and failed to do much with the ball kicked and the Independents started a characteristic drive that had been lacking the entire afternoon. Gustin dashed the ends, McRee belted the line, and Ellison ran the ends until the ball was within the shadow of the Lawrence Countians goal posts, but here the Moulton lads threw the Independent backs for repeated losses when Moody, Vaughn, Free and the Shelton brothers broke through the line as if it were made of paper. Moulton attempted a kick that was blocked by Lee but Moulton recovered very nearly on her own goal line and Moulton again prepared to kick. Goodlett's kick went straight up in the air going outside near the six yard line and the teams changed goals as the quarter ended. McRee smashed the Moulton line for the touchdown at the beginning of the fourth quarter and was never stopped. Gustin failed on try for point. The Independents kicked to Moulton and Free was away on a long dash up the field for 50 yards finally being brought down on the Independents' 30 yard line by Gustin. The Independents held and Ellison adopted a forward passing attack that carried the ball again within the shadows of the Moulton goal line but the heavy defense of the Moulton lads again refused to budge and the ball went over. The game ended in Independents have lost but one game this year and have a good record, for the Leighton lads to attempt to "mutilate" while the Leighton squad has played some of the strongest teams in the section with comparative good results. They will present a strong, fast, and heavy line with an aggressive backfield, that will be quite probable, and that the men could find no better way in which to impress again the need and importance of no accidents during working hours.

It is thought that one of the largest crowds of the season will witness the game in as much as it is the last game of the season that the home folks will have an opportunity to see.

Albany High will play in Florence on Thanksgiving and the Decatur High school team has not yet scheduled a game for Turkey Day.

The Independents emerged from the Moulton game in good shape with only McCabe and Cobb suffering minor or injuries from the tilt. Cobb was taken out early in the game after some severe pounding in the line and McCabe was hurt late in the third quarter when he suffered a twisted arm when trying to block a Moulton kick.

The Independents will place a full lineup on the field and are probably in better condition than when they played Florence Normal some two weeks ago. They are determined that only one defeat will be chalked against them for the season and they will be in there fighting from the start until the finish.

and in industrial plants of all kinds, have not been actuated by the hope of financial gain—while incidentally all concerned benefit in that way—but by a desire to prevent pain and misery—and deaths.

At the local shops a committee headed by Mr. Mathews, and composed of men from all the many departments of the shops meets regularly and discusses ways and means for preventing accidents.

May Have Another Big Celebration

In speaking of the fine and perhaps unsurpassed record of the local shopmen against reportable accidents, Mr. Mathews was asked, "Why not have another such big celebration soon, such as was held here last spring, to commemorate the shops having gone through one month without an accident?" and he replied that such a move was quite probable, and that the men could find no better way in which to impress again the need and importance of no accidents during working hours.

In the spring close to two dozen officials of the Loniaville and Nashville railroad and R. L. Pilling, director for "Safety First" for the entire Loniaville and Nashville system, met one evening at the R. R. R. M. C. A. and following a "banquet" attended by many scores of local shopmen, in speeches set forth the importance of safety first and praised the shopmen for the high record they had set up" for the rest to shoot at."

Now that the shopmen have done over five times as well against accidents, as they did in the spring, it is expected by many that some means will be devised to celebrate the accomplishment.

POTENTIAL WEALTH AND SCENERY
OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY

Over and over again the wonderful potential possibilities of the Tennessee Valley have been stated and re-stated, and yet the subjects is far from being exhausted.

Embrace within her boundaries there is possibly more natural and diversified resources than can be found in any other similar area. Her mountains of limestone rock which have lain un molested for past centuries are just being utilized as science has found that there are millions in this great mass of nature's formation, since the formula for concrete has been reduced to a science.

These rugged, unsightly places which dot this valley, unattractive to the eye except for their rugged grandeur and isolation, are now being eagerly sought by those who see beyond the surface and fabulous prices are being paid for what was considered hitherto as practically worthless.

Geologists tell us that, every acre of surface is equal to another, it matters not the formation once the potential qualities and worth of that area is studied and mastered.

Surely the time has come when aided by science these things have been worked out to a mathematical certainty and there is being rapidly added to this country's resources, various other avenues of deriving revenue in large quantities.

For magnificent grandeur, (to say nothing of the wealth wrapped up in this natural formation) the mountain scenery embraced in this section will compare favorably with any other. To the east especially may we turn and find range after range of mountain scenery, on whose rugged slopes there bubbles forth innumerable springs of finest water, and fingering its way down the steep declivities, goes to freshen and speed up the sleepy streams at its base.

There giant trees, the product of the centuries stand as if viewing the peaceful valley below, defying modern civilization to molest their peaceful habitation.

Situated between these mountain ranges, there are coves of potentiality rich land, which stretches away like a green carpet as far as the eye of man can fathom.

Standing on one of these high elevations, the most picturesque scenery imaginable greets the eye of the observer. In close proximity there rises promontory after promontory. Raise the vision and there stretches away before the enraptured gaze of man, a peaceful valley, dotted here and there with homes of settlers who have gone to these wild places and pitched their tents, and as far as the eye can reach this enraptured sight is unbroken, until lost in the maze of blue in the distance.

MORGAN COUNTY MAN SHOWS HOW
ALABAMA CAN DO "DRY FARMING"

Fifty days of drought in North Alabama where droughts are not the rule, may be calculated to cause our farmers to consider the good points of "dry farming." Out west, where rains come with annoying infrequency, the "dry" farmer has learned how to get along with the minimum of rainfall. Sometimes, even with all the expert practice he can put into his farm activities, crops are a failure, because there is such a thing as too little moisture even for "dry farming." As a rule however, where consistently practiced and where the farmers do not lose heart too quickly, the "dry" farmer has managed to do surprisingly well.

That "dry farming" can be successfully practiced in Alabama is being proven by a Morgan County man, a dweller near Albany-Decatur. He appears to have realized when the drought set in that his farming and gardening work would have to be conducted upon a different plan from that usually adopted by North-Alabama farmers. This man, Edwin Baker, did "dry farming" on his Morgan county land in a manner that would do credit to the best "dry" farmers of the dry Southwest and the results he obtained prove that "dry farming" can be made profitable wherever one tries it intelligently.

The Albany-Decatur Daily says of Mr. Baker's "dry farming" experiment:

The "dry farming" accomplishments of Edwin Baker, a local man, who spends some of his time in the city, looking after other businesses, are too remarkable to be passed over lightly. With only one rain on his three acres in turnips near the Twin Cities by the use of modern dry farming tools and methods, Mr. Baker has already sold $700 worth of turnips and turnip greens, from his present crop and the crop is due to market $800. worth of the same products from the same acres before Christmas.

In addition to what he did with turnips, Mr. Baker began this summer to raise okra, and on about an acre of ground he has raised over $500 of that garden vegetable.

Four acres of ground, then are to bring in over $2,000. Such an accomplishment is a practical demonstration of the possibilities of "dry farming" right at our doors. There has been no difficulty in finding a market for either the turnips, the greens or the okra. Those products were sold like hot cakes throughout the cities.

It is said that only a few new tools were necessary to enable "dry" farming to be done here in the Tennessee Valley, and that the main thing is to work the produce frequently but not very deep. It has been shown that ground holds the moisture much better, if it is not disturbed to a great depth—once the ground at planting time has been worked according to the approved rules.

While we may not have another drought of fifty or more days' duration in many years, the fact that we have had one of that length makes it necessary for Alabama farmers to do some thinking along "dry" farming lines. It might be a good plan for farmers to keep in mind the methods employed by the Morgan farmer.

Droughts are uncertain things but when they come they generally hurt the farmer worse than anyone else, therefore the farmer is the one who should most guard against them—Anniston Star.

THE SOVEREIGN RIGHT TO VOTE
DISREGARDED IN THE SOUTH

A table showing the actual vote cast in the national election this year, as compared with the votes that might have been cast has been prepared by the National Association of Manufacturers; and while the figures given are not official, they are generally regarded as substantially correct. The tables show that 52.8 per cent of the potential voters exercised their right compared to a 49.1 per cent vote in the national election of 1920, a gain of only 3.7 per cent after all the efforts made to get out a "full vote" in 1924! The figures show that fewer votes were cast in the South this year than in 1920, the gain in voting strength being in the north. Of the potential voters in Alabama only 17.5 per cent actually voted, the tables show, while in South Carolina, the lowest of the states as to per cent of voters voting, the percentage was only 8. In the state of Indiana, 83 per cent of those allowed to vote cast ballots. A group of northern states appears as follows:

Kansas	83.2 per cent
West Virginia	80.3 per cent
Minnesota	76.3 per cent
North Dakota	73.2 per cent
New Hampshire	72.1 per cent
Rhode Island	70.1 per cent
Delaware	69.6 per cent
Missouri	69.4 per cent
Iowa	68.8 per cent
Illinois	67.5 per cent
New Jersey	66.5 per cent
Georgia	65.6 per cent

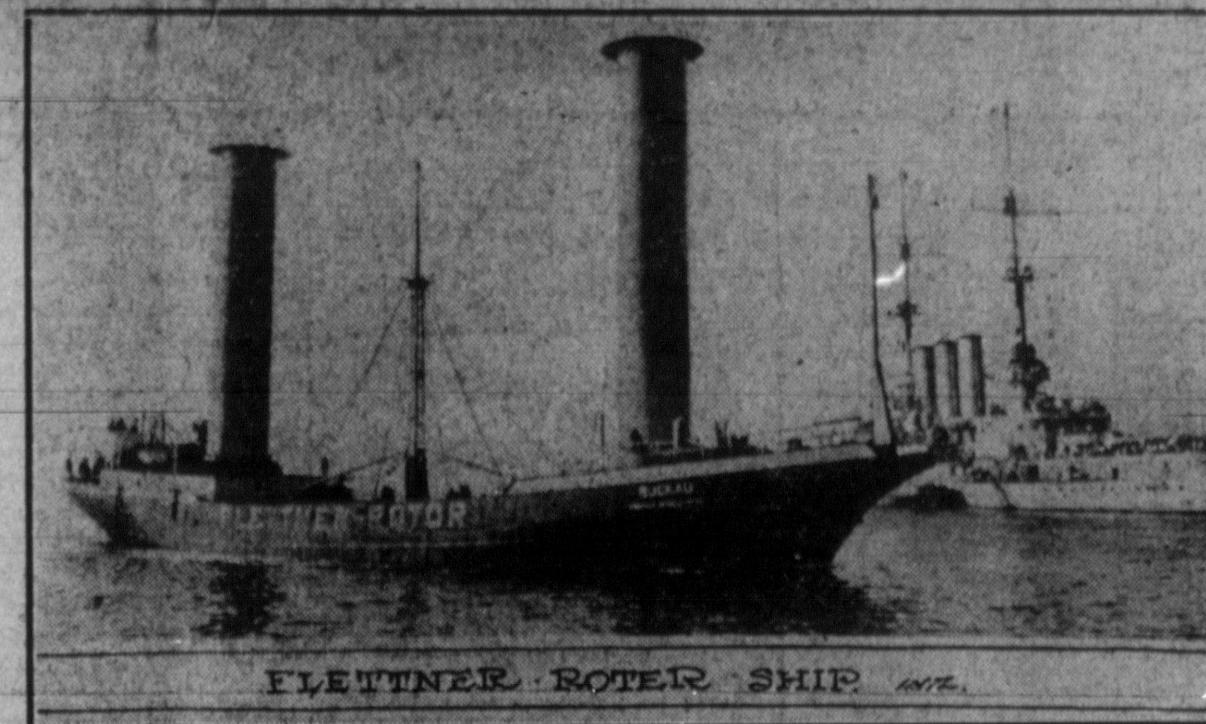

The following 12 Southern states, excepting Kentucky (make a very poor showing as to votes cast:

South Carolina	10.1 per cent
Mississippi	8.0 per cent
Louisiana	10.8 per cent
Virginia	12.5 per cent
Alabama	13.4 per cent
Arkansas	17.5 per cent
Tennessee	20.0 per cent
Florida	23.7 per cent
Texas	25.1 per cent
North Carolina	29.6 per cent
Kentucky	37.2 per cent
	61.0 per cent

In connection with the very light vote of the South, it should be recalled that election results in this section were decided in the democratic primary elections in most cases, and many Southerners figured it was unnecessary to go to the polls November 4.

And it is nothing new, to be reminded that the South has very little to do with the election of the president, except when the republican party is badly split up. The only Southern states showing an increased vote this year were Mississippi and Texas, all the others showed a decrease according to the manufacturer's table.

SAILLESS SAILING SHIP HAS WIND TURBINES

FLETTNER ROTOR SHIP

Herewith is pictured the sailless sailing ship, built by the German engineer, Anton Flettner, which has proven the marine sensation of the year. It is shown in Kiel harbor, where it was demonstrated to the Association of Marine Architects. Instead of sails, Flettner uses two revolving towers, smooth and capped at each end to assure the formation of a perfect vacuum. There is no propeller whatever, but the towers are revolved by a small Diesel engine. Only the position of the towers on the ship and the rudder control its direction of travel. Momentum is given by the pressure of wind from an angle on the revolving towers, whose effective speed is regulated to correspond to the velocity of the wind.

Labor Federation Sets

El Paso Meeting

(Associated Press)

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 24.—The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, today rejected by an overwhelming majority proposals for the support of a new political party, and reaffirmed adherence to a policy of strict non-partisan political activity.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 24.—Opposition to governmental invasion of industry as a guiding policy of the American Federation of Labor was approved today by the Federation's annual convention.

The convention accepted, without debate, a sentence of the executive council's report, declaring "that industry must find its own way through the difficulties with which it is beset, or face the alternative of state intrusion, which must inevitably lead to bureaucracy and breakdown. Democracy cannot come into industry through the state," the report said.

"Before a constructive democracy can develop in industry, labor must everywhere be fully organized," the report continued.

"Before labor can be everywhere fully organized, the right of citizens pre-supposed in a political democracy, must be recognized in a fullness that leaves no room or question, much less demands a constant struggle for enforcement."

Efforts to curb the use of injunction in labor disputes will be continued under recommendation of the committee, approved by the delegates. The convention unanimously approved a petition to congress to grant to the Philippine Islands the right to exercise in full liberty, freedom and self government."

Of Social Service

It was under new business that J. F. Lovin stated the concern that the council do some definite work through its social service committee. Two invitations were given the council for its next meeting place by Rev. William D. Barnes, from the Ninth Street M. E. church, and one from Dr. Oscar and T. L. Baker, from the First Methodist church. As the council had met recently at the South Albany church, it was agreed to hold the December meeting at the First Methodist church of Decatur.

The closing prayer was offered by Dr. James D. Hunter, pastor of the Central Methodist church.

Albany Firemen
Fight Woods Fire

The Albany fire department answered a call to Austinville at 6 o'clock last night to extinguish a wood blaze. The water supply was inaccessible and it was necessary to use chemicals and brooms to stop the flames, which threatened to jump the road into the town. A light wind made the task difficult, but the danger was stopped before material damage was done.

and habits as well as being physically perfect will be accepted.

"We find that 50 men or more each station at Decatur for enlistment and it is safe to say not more than five of that number can pass the requirements of the Army examinations, failing on account of physical condition, light weight, or poor character, the latter being the quickest cause for rejection.

"It is the policy of the government to have an army of real men, men of character, so jail birds, drunkards, gamblers, etc., are wasting their time in applying for enlistment in the Army of the United States," it was pointed out.

The Calmly Madding Advice Dr. Pettit Gave Madge.

THE involuntary little cry of alarm that broke from me at Edith Fairfax's message, brought Dr. Pettit hurrying toward me from the hall where he had been standing, patiently annoyed by my request to wait until I should have answered the ring of the telephone. "What's the trouble?" he began stiffly, and something about his antagonistic attitude exasperated me as much as did the sudden disconnection of the wire between Edith and myself.

"Everything is wrong," I snapped, flashing the receiver slowly, when every impulse cried to me to jingle it furiously up and down: "Edith Fairfax telephones that something has happened to Mother Graham and Central cut me off before I could learn what had happened. I don't even know whether she is dead or alive."

"Everything is wrong," I snapped, he retorted, and, although I knew he meant to be kind, I felt like throwing something at him: something that would reflect his conviction, a familiar one to me, that in any emergency a man's mind and hand are better than those of any woman.

"No, thank you," I retorted, and then for the space of two or three minutes I went through the regular motions of a battle to regain a telephone connection, becoming so nervous in the struggle that when Edith's voice again sounded in my ears, I lost my self-control and shouted hysterically into the mouthpiece:

"Is she dead, Edith? Oh, don't tell me she's dead!"

"Stop this at once!"

At the first word, Dr. Pettit started forward, and before I had time to feel his admonitory hand firmly pressing my shoulder:

"Stop this at once," he said authoritatively, "or I shall take the receiver away from you."

Gone completely were his stiffness and shyness, lost as always with him

THE HOME KITCHEN

How to Prepare a Novel Feast
for Thanksgiving

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

THOSE who like novelty and are tired getting up the old-fashioned turkey dinner for Thanksgiving will find in this plan a new and simplified idea worth trying. A lot of the preparations can be made the day before, which will appeal to the busy woman and will lighten the work of the holiday so that the hostess may get some pleasure out of it instead of just hard work.

There is an economical twist to the foods purchased that also is a point in its favor. The dinner is a four course one, and the menu is very attractive.

Menu.

Cream of Tomato Soup, Turkey Pie, Baked Potatoes, Creamed Onions, Cranberry Jelly, Celery, Olives, Salted Nuts, Fruit Salad, Cheese Straws, Mince and Pumpkin Pies, Coffee, Cider.

The stock for the soup may be made the day before by taking a quart can of tomatoes and adding to it a chopped onion, cut celery stalks and leaves, half bay leaf, quarter bud of garlic, a few sprigs of fresh savory herbs, and a cupful of cold water. Boil gently for forty minutes, strain through a fine sieve and set aside. Next day remove grease from soup to about a pint and a half of milk and add to it a saltspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, turn it into the hot tomato, thicken with well made roux, and strain into a tureen. A little sugar should be added to the tomato with the other seasoning. The soup should be velvety but not too thick.

The turkey for the pie should be carefully selected. Prepare as usual and truss for boiling. Put in a few celery leaves and a minced onion with the bird, cover it and boil gently until tender. Lift when done and let cool slightly, then remove the meat from the bone and set aside. Throw all bones and trimmings into the liquor, season it and boil down to about a quart, strain and set to cool. When cool remove the fat and set away.

The next day reheat and thicken, then cool the gravy slightly. Line a well buttered deep pudding dish with good short crust, make a small quantity of savory nut stuffing and place a little mound in the center, then heap the turkey neatly around and over it. Last of all pour in a goodly quantity of the gravy, put on the top crust, leaving a vent in the center and finish the edge with the floured dinner of bread. Bake in a medium oven about an hour, covering the top if the crust browns too rapidly. Serve the remainder of the gravy hot with the pie.

Make the cranberry jelly in individual moulds to serve with the turkey pie. Though the baked potatoes are sufficient with the creamed onions yet as a special treat Mary-Land sweet potatoes may be added to the menu. And sweet pickles may be added to the olives, celery and salted nuts if desired. Though these additions amplify they do not add to the courses appreciably.

The fresh fruit salad must be made the last minute to have it at its best.

Cheese straws, cheese balls, or cheese melted in the oven on crackers may be served with the salad, according to convenience and taste.

Now we come to the fourth and last course. The pies should be made of good short crust, well baked, and may be hot or cold according to taste.

ON HIS MIND

WHEN a man suddenly finds himself possessed of a treasure—a big treasure like a large photograph of her—and he wishes to transport it home unseen by anyone, and is eager to get it home unbroken, what more natural place in which to carry it than his hat?

And could any place be more appropriate? She is on his mind—in slang as well as correct parlance—when he tenderly carries this treasure of treasures there, far above him!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT

An Old Brass Box

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

HERE it was in the new living room—the old brass box.

A great box it is, broad and wide and deep, and on the cover is carved a scene from some old Black Forest legend.

A lusty forester sits on an upturned keg in some forest cave. He has a leather bottle in his hand and seated beside him on the keg is a buxom beauty in old-fashioned peasant dress.

At the feet of the couple is a queer old dog, and looking in at the door of the cave is a mischievous squirrel—oh, it's quite an old box, it is easy to see that and very curious and to my mind, very ornamental!

I'd rather have it in my house than all the brand new "suites" of furniture in all the shops in the smartest shopping streets in the world.

So would my friend who owns the box.

So she has stood it right under the broad window where the sun makes it gleam in the quiet room like a smile from an old friend, not seen for sometime, but never forgotten.

What a Treasure!

I asked my friend to tell me about it. She laughed. "Yes," she said, "you're right, it is old, quite old—but I bought it myself not so very many years ago. Let's see—why yes, it was twenty years ago, after all!"

"I'll tell you about it.

"My husband and I had just moved into our first big house.

"We were awfully proud of the house and we did everything we could to make it comfortable and attractive. Yes, we even hoped to make it look grand and prosperous and very, very well-to-do. You see, we were young in those days and we did want people to think that we were successful. "Nothing succeeds like success," my husband used to say, and so we always put the best foot forward and it paid, just as he said it would.

"But we didn't have very much money to spend for furniture and somehow our living room looked a little bare.

"We need two chairs and some sort of a divan and maybe a good table, something carved, rich and quiet, don't you know, over in that corner. Well, some day—so I said to myself.

"But before the same day came an old friend sent us a distinguished visitor, and we gave a dinner for him, and we just had to fill up that living room, so I went downtown with a certain sum of money in my purse and that sum of money must do, no more and no less.

"When I got to the place where I meant to spend the money, there stood the old brass box in the corner, and it hypnotized me. I couldn't get away from it—I simply couldn't—and I bought it. I paid every cent I brought and went into debt for quite a little sum and when my husband came home to dress for dinner, there was no new table and there were no new chairs and there was no divan—there was just a brass box and he looked at me in horror!

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am twenty-six years of age, the only child of a rancher. I have everything a girl could wish for. Still I am lonely.

All my country friends are married now and I long for the companionship of unmarried people.

Not having any one else to go with, I have been entertained by my dear friends of the family, who are nearest to me.

My relatives urge me to marry as they think this is my last and best chance. To me it is very tempting when I think of a trip to Europe, a city home and so forth.

Do you think I'll be happy with this man of wealth, whom I don't love?

My country life is so monotonous, that's why this all seems so wonderful to me.

LITTLE COUNTRY MOUSE:

This is a matter which must be decided by your own heart and the counsel of those who are nearest to you. A happy marriage is based on love and companionship and one factor is just as important to her in care of this office.

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Do not let your present unhappiness drive you to do something which may be productive of more unhappiness. And yet, on the other hand, do not be too quick to throw away a chance which may prove the making of your life.

Look into your heart and listen to the advice of those who hold your interest as dear as their own. Good luck to you.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns.

Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

YOUR HEALTH

What a Deaf Person Should Do to Find Relief

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York,

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

If you had to have either one or the other, which would you take—blindness or deafness? I'll wager you will say deafness.

It is hard to find a means of determining the comparative difference between blindness and deafness, but a pretty good test is the effect each has upon its victims. In my experience there is a marked difference.

Very deaf persons are apt to become moody, silent and aloof. They are suspicious that their friends avoid them. They are fearful of being talked about. It requires bravery and common sense to endure deafness sweetly. To be cut off from the voices of dear ones, from music, from the pleasure and instruction carried through the ear, is a great affliction.

To my mind the worst thing about profound deafness is the mental depression it produces. On this account it appears to me to be a greater affliction than blindness.

You need but to close your eyes to see what it would mean to be blind. The sense of color, of form, of beauty, the joy of looking into the faces of your friends—these are gone if blindness comes.

But the blind can listen to their friends. They can hear music; they can be entertained and instructed through the sense of hearing. They can converse and have a part in the world's activities. Of course blindness is a terrible affliction—but it does not cut off the victim from intercourse with his fellows.

We are making progress in the relief of eye and ear diseases. Deafness and blindness are not so hopeless as they were a generation ago.

The other day I had the pleasure of meeting a distinguished lawyer, now advanced in age, but remarkably well preserved for his years. He stays in his room and denies himself to the world because he is deaf. I am sorry about this because there are so many hearing devices that I am sure he could have his hearing so much improved but that he might conceive no use for them. In every large city the surgical supply houses carry supplies of hearing devices. A visit to such a place and a little patience on the part of customer and salesman will result in the selection of some sort of apparatus that will be helpful.

The specialist in ear diseases should be given every opportunity to aid the afflicted one. There is much benefit to be had in many cases of deafness. Don't give up and say: "It's no use!" Try, anyhow. You may be delighted by the results.

Answers to Health Questions

A. B. C. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what to do to remove moles from my face?

A.—Moles can be removed by means of an electric needle, but this should be done by an expert.

A. L. Q.—I am a girl of 14 and a tea dancer. When I kick or stretch too much the muscles of my thighs ache so that I can hardly walk. What would you advise?

A.—This cannot be relieved while you continue dancing. Rest is the only cure, since the muscles have probably been overtaxed.

L. H. C. Q.—Is it advisable for a person over forty to have tonsils removed?

A.—Yes, if he is otherwise in good physical condition and his doctor advises such procedure.

it come on at certain times?

Those tiny teeth are a priceless gift—guard them well!

WRIGLEY'S is a wonderful help to keep teeth clean and sound, for it clears out the crevices, makes the mouth sweet and removes acid conditions from which most people suffer.

A prominent physician says: "It is surprising how free from decay the teeth can be kept by using gum after each meal."

WRIGLEY'S is good, not only for the teeth, but for the nerves and appetite and digestion, too.

The whole family should use

Sakr-el-Bahr, standing on the poop-deck, shouted his orders to the steersmen in their niches on either side of the stern, and skillfully the vessel was steered through that narrow passage into the calm lagoon whose depths were crystal clear. Here before coming to rest, Sakr-el-Bahr followed the inevitable corsair practice of going about, so as to be ready to leave his moorings and make for the open again at a moment's notice.

He came at last alongside the rocky buttresses of a gentle slope that was utterly deserted by all save a few wild goats browsing near the summit. There were clumps of broom thick with golden flower about the base of the hill. Higher, a few gnarled and aged olive trees reared their gray heads, from which the rays of the western sun struck a glint as of silver.

Laroque and a couple of sailors went over the bulwarks on the larboard quarter dropped lightly to the horizontal shafts of the oars, which were rigidly poised, and walking out upon them gained the rocks and proceeded to make fast the vessel by ropes fore and aft.

Sakr-el-Bahr's next task was to set a watch, and he appointed Laroque, sending him to take his station on the summit of the head whence a wide range of view was to be commanded.

Pacing the poop with Marzak the Basha grew reminiscent of former days when reviving the seas as a simple corsair he had used this cove both for purposes of ambush and concealment. There were, he said, few harbors in all the Mediterranean so admirably suited to the corsairs' purposes as this; it was a haven of refuge in case of peril, and an unrivaled lurking-place in which to lie in wait for the prey. He remembered once having lain there with the formidable Dragut-Reis, a fleet of six galleys, their presence entirely unsuspected by the Genoese admiral, Doria, who had passed majestically along with three caravels and seven galleys.

Marzak, pacing beside his father, listened but half-heartedly to these reminiscences. His mind was all upon Sakr-el-Bahr, and his suspicions of that palmetto bale were quickened by the manner in which for the last two hours he had seen the corsair hovering thoughtfully in its neighborhood.

He broke in suddenly upon his father's memories with an expression of what was in his mind.

"The thanks to Allah," he said, "that it is thou who command this expedition, else might this cove's advantages have been neglected."

"Not so," said Asad. "Sakr-el-Bahr knows them as well as I do. He has used this vantage-point aforetime. It was himself who suggested that this would be the very place in which to await this Spanish craft."

"Yet had he sailed alone I doubt if the Spanish argosy had concerned him greatly. There are other matters on his mind, O my father. Observe him yonder, all lost in thought. How many hours of this voyage has he spent thus. He is a man trapped and desperate. There is some fear ranking in him. Observe him I say."

"Allah pardon thee," said his father, shaking his old head and sighing over so much impetuosity of judgment. "Must thy imagination be for ever feeding on thy malice?" Yet I blame not thee, but thy Sicilian mother, who has fostered this hostility in thee. Did she not hoodwink me into making this unnecessary voyage?"

"I see thou hast forgot last night and the Frankish slave-girl," said his son.

"Nay, then thou seest wrong. I have not forgot it. But neither have I forgot that since Allah hath exalted me to be Basha of Algiers, He looks to me to deal in justice. Come, Marzak, set an end to all this. Perhaps tomorrow thou shalt see him in battle, and after such a sight as that never again will thou dare say evil of him. Come, make thy peace with him, and let me see better relations betwixt you hereafter."

And raising his voice he called Sakr-el-Bahr, who immediately turned and came up the gangway. Marzak stood by in a sulky mood, with no notion of doing his father's will by holding out an olive branch to the man who was like to cheat him of his birthright ere all was done. Yet it was he who greeted Sakr-el-Bahr when the corsair set foot upon the poop.

"Does the thought of the coming fight perturb thee, dog of war?" he asked.

"Am I perturbed, pup of peace?" was the crisp answer.

"It seems so. Thine aloofness, thine abstractions—"

"Are signs of perturbation, dost suppose?"

"Of what else?"

New York Letter

New York Journal-Advertiser

NEW YORK.—Forty-two trunks accompanied Jean Nash when she landed here this past week from Europe for a two weeks' visit in our midst. Miss Nash, who is said to be "Europe's best dressed woman," insists that the entire two score and more are necessary in order to ensure her having the proper garb for each occasion that might arise. Two weeks, after all, is fourteen days, she says, "and four costumes a day meet only the requirements of the 'seasons' of the day." Why, of course, exception to the fields in which he would not be looked for under such a description. But that is what he is on a squash team now taking part in the tournament. Mr. Rockefeller has been a devoted follower of squash for several years and played in the exhibition match at the opening of the Whitehall courts. And, still it doesn't seem a natural role for him.

Three thousand dollars was the sum paid the other night at a local art gallery for a rymed letter written by the poet, John Keats, to his brother, George. Other Keats manuscripts brought $1,300 each. General Grant's original letter book, used by him during his campaign against General Lee, containing carbon copies of nineteen communications regarding the surrender of the Southern Army, was sold at the same sale for $2,400.
